ABE POLLIN

Pride n. 1. pleasure or satisfaction over something done, achieved, or owned; 2. a feeling displayed by Bullets owner Abe Pollin.

RESIDENCE:
Bethesda, MD

BIRTHDATE:
December 3, 1923

BIRTHPLACE:
Philadelphia, PA

PURCHASED THE BULLETS:
October 24, 1964

BECAME TEAM'S SOLE OWNER:
July 23, 1968

Abe Pollin has a lot to be proud about these days. Last June, 55 high school seniors' dreams came true as they became college-bound, thanks to Pollin's generosity. In 1988, Pollin spoke to the fifth grade students at Seat Pleasant Elementary School in Seat Pleasant, Md.

"When you are ready to go to college, there will be funds to pay your tuition," he told the students. "The only condition is that you graduate from high school and are accepted by a college."

This is just one example of what separates Pollin from most wealthy businessmen. He possesses a passionate need to give back to the community.

"We're put on the earth to do more than just take care of ourselves," says Pollin, "and those who find themselves in a position to give rather than receive are rather lucky. Particularly those of us in sports have a special responsibility because we are able to provide things that people like, such as teams, players and tickets. It's critical that we make use of those assets to give back to the community more than we take out."

As chairman of all USAir Arena based operations, Pollin oversees the corporate umbrella of Centre Group. In addition to its two best known entities — the Bullets and the NHL's Capitals — the burgeoning operation also handles arena sponsorships, advertising and computer ticketing services, as well as the design and management of other arenas.

As the longest tenured owner in the National Basketball Association, Pollin has been at the center of every major issue, including the salary cap, expansion and the reform of the league's marketing efforts. In the process, he has become one of the most experienced and respected individuals in the world of professional sports.

"Abe has been a wise and experienced counselor," explains NBA Commissioner David Stern. "He has extraordinary respect from the other owners because of his success, experience and his personality."

Born and raised in Philadelphia, Pollin worked for his father's plumbing/contracting business for many years. After graduating from George Washington University in 1945, Pollin continued working for the family business until 1957, when he formed his own contracting firm. Pollin rapidly established his name amongst the elite builders in the Washington D.C. area. In fact, he was the first Washington contractor to build an apartment house with a roof-top swimming pool.

Pollin's career took a turn in 1964 as he and two partners purchased the NBA's Baltimore Bullets for a then-record $1.1 million. His days as a contractor were not to end, but Pollin's new priority became the franchise.

"I've been a sports nut all my life," says Pollin, "and I always dreamt of owning a professional franchise." When the ownership opportunity came up, "I grabbed it," he said.

After becoming sole owner of the Bullets in July of 1968, Pollin began searching to expand his empire. In 1972, the NHL was to begin expansion and Pollin secured a franchise, later to be named the Capitals.

To accommodate the Capitals and to give the Bullets a state-of-the-art facility, Pollin decided to travel south down Interstate 95, and move his teams to the Washington D.C. area. Pollin originally envisioned being a tenant in somebody else's arena, but changed his mind, and decided to build his own. Pollin's many years of experience as a contractor gave him a good idea of just what he wanted his new arena to be.

"It couldn't just be any arena," Pollin sternly said. "As long as we were building a building in the nation's capital, it had to be one of the best in the world."

The USAir Arena (originally called Capital Centre), was strategically designed so that every seat in the house would have a perfect view. Pollin also provided several "Sky Suites," the first luxury skyboxes to be introduced in an America sporting facility. The arena also sported the country's first giant four-sided screen, suspended from the arena's ceiling, that could show fans instant replays and other highlights.

Since the arena opened, more than 45 million people of all ages have watched not only basketball and hockey, but soccer, family shows, concerts, and countless other extravagant events.

These days, Pollin is deeply involved in another new challenge, finalizing plans for a state-of-the art arena in downtown Washington D.C. to be known as MCI Center. Ready for play during the 1997-98 season, the MCI Center is expected to be the most technology-advanced sports and entertainment facility in the world.

A dream for Pollin, is to bring another NBA championship to Washington for the arena's inaugural season. A 1998 championship would coincide with the 20th anniversary of the Bullets 1978 World Championship, the highlight of Pollin's sporting career.

Pollin currently resides in Bethesda, Md., with his wife Irene. Their older son, Robert, and his wife, Sigrid, live in Riverside, Calif., with their two daughters. Robert Pollin is an economics professor at the University of Southern California. Abe and Irene's youngest son James works for Royal Caribbean Cruise Lines in Florida. ★

JERRY SACHS

Vice Chairman

If Abe Pollin is Centre Group's commander-in-chief, Jerry Sachs is the field general. Sachs, known to many around arena management as the "nuts and bolts guy", is directly responsible for overseeing and supervising all of Pollin's endeavors. Sachs' position is just about the most comprehensive managerial position that one could ask for.

"If you enjoy that kind of thing," he said, "it's the best job in the world. Who else gets paid to come to events?"

Actually, it is not quite that simple. Watching events take place at the USAir Arena, for Sachs, are the rewards for countless hours of hard work and the pursuit of excellence.

"Everyone's hard work makes things run so well," he said. "It's a good feeling to know that I am a part of it all."

Like Pollin, Sachs is also a world-class model humanitarian and philanthropist. A major issue for Sachs is fighting drunk driving. Over the years, Sachs has devoted a great deal of time and energy towards assisting organizations such as T.E.A.M. (Techniques for Effective Alcohol Management) and M.A.D.D. (Mothers Against Drunk Driving). He also founded the highly successful organization, W.R.A.P. (Washington Regional Alcohol Program). His generosity is especially evident during the holiday season. For many years, Sachs and his family have spent Christmas and Thanksgiving at soup kitchens, feeding the poor, hungry and homeless.

"It's an opportunity to renew our touch with the problems of humanity," he said. "I think it almost does more for us than the people being fed."

A former U.S. Marine, Sachs attended Dartmouth College, where he played lacrosse , and received his B.A. in history form Western Reserve University in 1960. That same year, he began his professional career, working in the public relations office for the Baltimore Orioles. In fact, Sachs was so intent on landing a job in sports administration that he offered to work for free. The Orioles were glad to oblige.

In 1963, Sachs was promoted by the Orioles to public relations director. Two years later, the Atlanta Braves hired Sachs to manage public relations, marketing and advertising. Sachs' next position came with Coca-Cola, where he held the position of Coordinator of Sports Activities. A major accomplishment for Sachs was forming the Coca-Cola Neighborhood Basketball League, a summer program for inner-city youths.

After achieving success in just about everything that he encountered, Sachs' next job was with the Bullets, as he was hired in 1970 as the team's general manager. His debut season with the Bullets couldn't have been better, as Washington battled to the NBA Finals.

When the team moved to Washington in 1973, Sachs helped smooth the transition process. When the USAir Arena opened its doors that season, Sachs was named president of the arena. That was some 45 million customers ago.

Sachs and his wife, Joyce, live in Bethesda, Md. They have one son, Gene, and one daughter, Barbara. ★

SUSAN O'MALLEY

RESIDENCE:
Chester, MD

BIRTHDATE:
November 7, 1961

BIRTHPLACE:
Washington, DC

STARTED WITH BULLETS:
August 1, 1986

NAMED BULLETS PRESIDENT:
May 9, 1991

Susan O'Malley's grade school teacher may have thought her essay on wanting to "run a sports franchise" was a bit unrealistic for a professional career, but dreams do come true. From a young age, O'Malley has always been certain as to what she wanted to do with her life, and measuring from the success she has brought the Bullets organization, her childhood dream has not only become a reality but has turned into a prosperous tenure.

On May 9, 1991, O'Malley became the highest ranking woman in sports (excluding female owners) when Abe Pollin named her president of the Bullets organization. This past summer, she assumed additional responsibilties as president of Pollin's Washington Capitals NHL franchise. In her current position, O'Malley will oversee all operations for the Bullets and Capitals, as well as the marketing efforts for the new MCI Center downtown arena project.

"The success of the Bullets franchise off the court in the past few years is a credit to the hard work of Susan and her staff," said Pollin. "I am convinced she will have the same type of impact and success with her new responsibilities."

O'Malley begins her fifth year as president of the Bullets. Under her leadership, the team has shattered all previous franchise records for average attendance and home sellouts. During the 1994-95 campaign, the Bullets sold out a franchise record 30 home games and increased the current record for average attendance by nearly 2,000 fans. Last season's average of 17,100 fans per game represented more than 93 percent of the arena's capacity.

"We are in the entertainment business," said O'Malley. "It is our job to make sure that people who purchase tickets to a Bullets game have an entertaining evening and are treated as guests in our building. If they are treated right, they will probably come back."

O'Malley has seen her "pro-active" service to customers bring booming results for the Bullets. In her first season handling off-court activities, the team experienced the largest ticket revenue year in the history of the franchise. In addition, that year, the club achieved the highest revenue rate of season tickets ever by a Bullets franchise, which includes the year following the 1977-78 Championship season.

Ticket holders are not the only ones who have commended O'Malley with rewards for her superb service. In 1994, Advertising Age Magazine ranked her as one of the top 100 marketers in the United States. She has quickly earned a reputation as a savvy sports marketer with an uncanny ability to generate excitement.

In addition to effortless marketing and customer service ventures, O'Malley has worked extremely hard securing additional broadcasting for Bullets games. In 1993, O'Malley sealed a deal with all-sports radio station WTEM Sportsradio 570 AM that will broadcast all

PRESIDENT

Bullets games, as well as showcase the team on two weekly radio shows. The team also secured Baltimore station WWLG Radio (1360 AM) to air the Bullets 82-game schedule. In addition, this season, O'Malley has created a partnership with WBDC-TV 50 to broadcast a minimum of 30 Bullets games. Home Team Sports (HTS), the team's flagship cable station, will produce the telecasts for both cable and broadcast television.

Prior to the 1992-93 season, O'Malley brought the team a weekly television show, "Bullets Jam Session," that was televised on Home Team Sports and WMAR-TV 2 in Baltimore. The show won an Emmy in its first season.

The organization's involvement in the community has never been more evident since O'Malley has guided the team's effort. Her off-the-court activities are equally impressive as her business operations for the team. She is actively involved with numerous community organizations and serves on the Board of Regents for her alma mater Mount St. Mary's.

Since being named president, the increased demand for O'Malley as a speaker at Washington and Baltimore civic groups, schools and business associations keeps her occupied whenever she manages to have a free moment.

O'Malley joined the Bullets organization during the 1986-87 season as the director of advertising. Her duties included the development of new advertising campaigns, as well as placement and exposure of existing campaigns

Because of the success in her rookie season, O'Malley took the position of director of marketing the following season. In 1988, O'Malley was named executive vice president where she was given total responsibility of overseeing marketing, sponsorship, ticket sales, advertising, accounting, public relations and community relations of the organization. She assumed her current position in 1991.

A 1983 graduate of Mount St. Mary's College in Emmitsburg, Md., O'Malley earned a bachelor of science degree in business and finance. Prior to joining the Bullets, O'Malley worked for the Earle Palmer Brown advertising firm for three years. Susan, a native of Clinton, Md., currently resides in Chester, Md. ★

WES UNSELD

RESIDENCE:
Baltimore, MD

BIRTHDATE:
March 14, 1946

BIRTHPLACE:
Louisville, KY

DRAFTED BY BULLETS:
#2 Overall
in 1968 NBA Draft

RETIRED AS A PLAYER:
March 29, 1981
(following 1980-81 season)

INDUCTED INTO HALL OF FAME:
May 3, 1985

Fifteen years after his retirement, Wes Unseld still remains a key player for the Washington Bullets. His duties, of course, no longer call for him to be a leading rebounder or scorer, but nevertheless, Unseld is working just as hard as he did during his prolific Hall of Fame career.

As Executive Vice President, a major task of Unseld's has been to head the research and planning of the MCI Center. Scheduled for opening in the fall of 1997, the new arena will be a direct portrayal of Unseld's commitment to excellence.

"Wes has been a great asset to the Bullets organization since the day he played his first game," said Bullets Owner Abe Pollin. "With him heading the development of the MCI Center, I know that things are in good hands. Wes has never let me down in anything he's ever done."

Thus far, Unseld has thoroughly enjoyed his responsibilities of working on the new downtown arena project. "It's the kind of thing where you really look forward to coming to work," he said. "It is exciting to see things progress so rapidly and know that I have an important part in making things happen. In a sense, it's almost like coaching a young team—I'm modeling, building and molding the new arena to the best it can possibly be, just as a coach would do with young players."

Unseld's dedication to the Bullets organization has been there since day one of his playing career. After his stellar career came to a close in 1981, Pollin recognized the importance of keeping his dedicated, hard-working star in the organization. Unseld was immediately hired by Pollin to serve as a front office executive. Pollin felt that Unseld's winning ways would be a positive force in the day-to-day operation of the Bullets organization.

As vice president, Unseld devoted a great deal of time towards making special appearances. He became one of the NBA's most popular and prolific speakers. In addition, he coordinated the Bullets Baltimore office, worked as an analyst for Bullets telecasts and was directly involved in sponsorships and community relations.

Prior to the 1987-88 season, Bullets Head Coach Kevin Loughery saw Unseld as a great motivator and invited Unseld to extend his basketball knowledge to the team as an assistant coach. Just 27 games into the season, with the team struggling at 8-19, Pollin released Loughery of his coaching duties and selected Unseld to replace him. The Bullets responded dramatically to Unseld's leadership as head coach, compiling a 30-25 record during the remainder of the regular season, and bringing the Bullets into the playoffs. Unseld went on to complete six more seasons as Bullets head coach.

When the final buzzer sounded, ending the Bullets 1993-94 season, Unseld walked to the scorer's table, reached for the microphone and told the sellout crowd of his decision to step down from his coaching duties. He received a warm reaction from those in attendance, not unlike the many rousing ovations he had received from Bullets fans during his 13-year NBA career.

The 6-foot-7 Unseld, who was best known as a player for his bone-jarring picks and full-court outlet passes, was chosen by the Bullets in the first round of the 1968 NBA Draft. His two-time All America honors while playing at the University of Louisville put him in position to be the second overall pick in the Draft.

Adapting to the rigors of the NBA came without difficulty for Unseld. Success came immediately, as Unseld's first NBA season graced him with not only Rookie-of-the Year honors, but the League's Most Valuable Player award as well. Only Wilt Chamberlain has been able to win both awards in the same season. Unseld was also selected to play in the NBA All-Star game that season, his first of five appearances.

Unseld also helped turn around the fortunes of the team as well. The Bullets improved 21 games in his rookie campaign. During the Unseld era, the franchise compiled a .580 winning percentage, compared with a .364 percentage prior to his days as a player. He was perhaps the greatest force in sending the Bullets to 12 consecutive playoff appearances, highlighted by the 1978 World Championship.

In the process, Unseld achieved numerous milestones and accomplishments. In the NBA record books, he ranks seventh all-time in rebounding; is one of a handful of players who have both scored 10,000 points and pulled down 10,000 rebounds; and is the Bullets all-time leader in games played, minutes, assists and rebounds.

Unseld's achievements on the court are not all that he has given to the public. He and his wife Connie opened up a school just outside of Baltimore that provides an excellent education to Baltimore youngsters. Connie, a school teacher during the 1970s, was frustrated with the education that children were receiving at the time, and wanted to do what she could to help remedy the situation.

The dream of the Unseld School became reality and has been an important part of the community ever since. Today, the Unseld School serves 200 students from pre-school through fifth grade with a student-teacher ratio of 12:1.

The Wes Unseld story does not end there though. As if founding a school, raising his family, playing 13 years in the NBA, coaching for another seven and working in the front office for another eight were not enough, Unseld has a slew of other notable achievements as well. On May 3, 1988, he was inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility. In 1975, he was the first recipient of the Walter Kennedy Citizenship Award, which is given annually to the NBA player or coach making the greatest contribution to his community. Unseld also served as Vice President of the NBA Players Association. He also continues to volunteer countless hours towards community projects, and runs the annual Wes Unseld Fantasy Camp.

JOHN NASH

RESIDENCE:
Annapolis, MD

BIRTHDATE:
November 28, 1946

BIRTHPLACE:
Philadelphia, PA

HIRED AS BULLETS GM:
June 18, 1990

In the five-plus years that John Nash has been general manager of the Bullets, he has rebuilt the team from a squad of ailing veterans to a more formidable group of young talent with bona-fide superstar potential. In fact, every single player on the current Bullets roster has been signed, traded or drafted by Nash.

With an eye towards players with potential to improve their game, he has rebuilt the Bullets steadily piece-by-piece. When he took the job with the Bullets June 18, 1990, Nash wasted no time in engineering his first major trade, as he sent Jeff Malone to Sacramento for Pervis Ellison, who was selected 1992 Most Improved Player.

Since that time, Nash has become known for pulling off some of the biggest trades in the league. In 1992, John Williams was traded to the Clippers for Don MacLean, who went on to win the 1993 Most Improved Player Award.

Without question, Nash's most significant day as Bullets GM came on November 17, 1994, when he pulled the trigger on a deal that sent Tom Gugliotta to the Golden State Warriors in exchange for 1994 Rookie of the Year Chris Webber. On the same day, Nash added another member of Michigan's famed "Fab Five" to his roster by signing first round pick Juwan Howard to a multi-year deal.

This past summer, Nash marked another impressive day when he traded for All-Star veteran point guard Mark Price and signed 1995 first round pick Rasheed Wallace on September 27, 1995.

Nash and his player personnel staff have fared equally well in obtaining players via the NBA Draft. During the previous four NBA Drafts, Nash has overseen the first round selections of Tom Gugliotta (traded for Webber), Calbert Cheaney, Howard and Wallace. He also has made key second round selections, including drafting Gheorghe Muresan with the 30th overall pick in the 1993 Draft. Muresan has improved greatly in two years with the team, finishing third in voting for league most improved honors last season.

"We have done quite well in the Draft

over the past few years," said Nash. "Hopefully well enough to ensure that we won't have a high pick for many years. I think, with the additions we've made, we will have a winning team for years to come."

In the free-agent market, Nash and his advisers have bolstered the Bullets bench with contributors such as Mitchell Butler and Doug Overton.

"This job, in a sense, is like a kid playing with building blocks," he said. "As long as you have a strong foundation, you can keep building and building to improve what you have."

Prior to joining the Bullets, Nash served as a "full-service" general manager with the 76ers, handling both the business and basketball aspects of the organization. Besides his duties in player personnel, Nash supervised marketing, ticket sales and radio and television broadcasts. His tenure with the Sixers was highlighted by a 1983 World Championship.

After then-Bullets General Manager Bob Ferry resigned in June of 1990, Bullets Owner Abe Pollin invited Nash to his office to discuss the open position. Pollin knew that Nash could provide valuable expertise to the Bullets organization.

"I spoke to many people in the NBA, and everyone held John Nash in high regard," said Pollin. "I talked to other people (about the position), but I usually go with my gut feeling, and after spending several hours with John, my gut said, 'This is my man.'"

Nash developed extensive basketball experience during his six-year stint (1975-81) as the executive director of the Big Five, and association of five major colleges in Philadelphia. His primary role was to coordinate the schedules for marketing and television purposes and to administer and promote college basketball for the five schools (LaSalle, Penn., Temple, Villanova and St. Joseph's).

Nash also had the opportunity to work with his favorite hobby—horse racing. For four years, Nash gained valuable experience managing advertising and promotions for the Atlantic City Race Course during the basketball off-season.

The 48-year-old Nash can still be found at the races occasionally, watching his horses run. He and his family own a modest thoroughbred stable in Pennsylvania.

John and his wife, Ann have six children: Andrea, 27; Elizabeth, 25; Meridyth, 24; Carolyn, 22; Brian, 15, and Barbara, 13. ★

JIM LYNAM

RESIDENCE:
Annapolis, MD

BIRTHDATE:
September 15, 1941

BIRTHPLACE:
Philadelphia, PA

HIRED AS HEAD COACH:
May 4, 1994

After Hall of Famer Wes Unseld stepped down from his position as head coach after the 1993-94 season, Bullets Owner Abe Pollin and General Manager John Nash knew they had a tough task in finding a replacement.

Pollin and Nash sought an individual with an established reputation and the ability to motivate and lead young players. The man that they saw as best suited for the position was Jim Lynam. On May 4, 1994, Lynam was officially named the 13th head coach in Bullets history.

"I have had the opportunity in my career to work with some of the best coaches in the history of the game, including Chuck Daly, Jack Ramsey, Paul Westhead, Billy Cunningham and Rollie Massimino, to name a few," said Nash. "Jim Lynam embodies qualities found in all five...NBA coaches and players alike that have come to know him share with me a deep respect for his talents as a teacher and motivator."

Prior to joining the Bullets, Lynam served as general manager of the 76ers, replacing Gene Shue in May of 1992. He had coached the Sixers for the previous four and a half seasons, compiling a 194-173 record (.529), making him the second winningest coach in Sixers history, behind only Billy Cunningham.

The pinnacle of Lynam's coaching career, thus far, came during the 1989-90 season as he led the Sixers to an Atlantic Division title with an impressive 53-29 record. The divisional title was the Sixers' first in seven years. Lynam finished second in balloting for Coach-of-the-Year honors.

"Jimmy's a good coach because he lets you play and stands up for you," said former 76er and current Phoenix Suns forward Charles Barkley. "He stands up for you with the management, the refs, the fans, the media, everybody. All he wants you to do for him is play hard and think a little bit. A lot of guys can't do either and a lot of the rest can only do one."

Head Coach

As an assistant to his former college coach Jack Ramsey, Lynam began his NBA coaching career with Portland in 1981. He then moved on to become head coach for the Clippers, leading the 1983-84 team to a 30-52 record. In his second year with the Clippers, he was replaced 61 games into the season with a 22-39 record.

Lynam's college coaching career covered 10 seasons, as he compiled a 158-118 record with a .572 winning percentage. Lynam spent two seasons at Fairfield University (23-29), five seasons at American University (70-61) and three at St. Joseph's University (65-28). His .699 winning percentage at St. Joseph's is the second best in school history, behind only Ramsay. During his stint with the Hawks, St. Joseph's made two NIT appearances and were Mid-East runner-up in the 1981 NCAA Tournament following a shocking last second upset of top-ranked DePaul.

Lynam is a member of the St. Joseph's and Philadelphia Big Five Hall of Fames. He and his wife, Kay, reside in Annapolis, Md. They have three children: Kathy, Denise and Jim, Jr. ✯

BOB STAAK

Assistant Coach

When Jim Lynam took over the head coaching reigns for the Bullets in May 1994, he needed an NBA coaching veteran to help guide him through the many difficult choices that need to be made on the court. It took Lynam less than a month to make a decision, tabbing Bob Staak as his top assistant.

Staak's 23 years of coaching experience have seasoned him into one of the league's most knowledgeable figures. Prior to joining the Bullets last season, Staak served as an assistant to Kevin Loughery of the Miami Heat for three seasons and as a scout for the Bullets during the 1990-91 season. Staak's entrance into the NBA came in 1989 when he was named assistant to Clippers Head Coach Don Casey.

The bulk of Staak's career thus far has been spent at the collegiate level, where he coached for 15 years. Ten of those seasons were spent as a head coach, where he skippered Wake Forest and Xavier. Staak's best season came during the 1983-84 campaign, when he led the Musketeers to a 22-8 record, the school's best in 35 years.

After graduating from the University of Connecticut in 1971, Staak began his career as head coach of East Hartford (CT) High School. Following that, he served as an assistant at UConn, William and Mary, and Penn.

Staak, who resides in Annapolis, Md., has a 13-year-old son, Corey. ★

DEREK SMITH

Derek Smith knows exactly how Head Coach Jim Lynam likes to run a game. After all, Smith played several years under Lynam when the two were affiliated with the Clippers and 76ers. On July 5, 1994, Smith accepted an offer to join forces with Lynam again as assistant coach for the Bullets.

"He was a warrior as a player and he's a warrior in life," said Bullets Vice President and General Manager John Nash. "He's a stable guy with great character who attacks every problem with ferocity."

Smith's NBA career began in 1982 with Golden State. In addition to the Warriors, Clippers and Sixers, Smith also had stints with Sacramento and Boston. His best season as a player came in 1984-85, when he ranked among the top five guards in scoring (22.1 ppg), rebounding (5.3 rpg), field goal percentage (.537) and blocks (52).

1995-96 BULLETS PLAYERS

WASHINGTON BULLETS 1995-96 SEASON PROSPECTUS

By Head Coach Jim Lynam

While a 21-61 record is certainly a measure reflecting that we were not a playoff caliber team last season, I do not believe it is a true measure of the progress of this team. While there were certainly contributing factors to our lack of success last season, the bottom line is that we were not good enough. But with Chris Webber and Juwan Howard returning, along with the additions of all-star point guard Mark Price and rookie Rasheed Wallace, I am extremely optimistic and excited about the upcoming season.

Crippled by a host of player injuries and illness last season, we were forced to use 15 different starting line-ups which significantly impacted this team's chemistry. In addition, as a young team composed of three rookies and four players with only one year of NBA experience under their belt, last season our players used a great deal of energy working on basic but critical qualities such as teamwork, confidence, and adjusting to playing on the NBA level.

But now all of that is behind us. We are a stronger, healthier team. We are beginning to understand each other's chemistry, and fortunately, we were able to select power forward/center Rasheed Wallace as the fourth overall pick in the NBA draft. We definitely have set our sights on the playoffs this season, and hope to benefit from and utilize the talent that we've worked so hard to acquire.

I could not be more elated with our front line. Chris Webber and Juwan Howard are undoubtedly the heart of this team. I envision this powerful pair of young forwards bringing great depth to the team this year. The Michigan duo are outstanding young players and they continue to prove their exceptional athletic ability with the Bullets. They bring a great deal of strength and versatility to the team and are not intimidated on the court or afraid to make big plays. Webber, who was acquired early last season from the Warriors, led the team in scoring (20.1 ppg), rebounding (9.6 rpg), steals (1.54 spg) and minutes played (38.3) last season. Howard was second on the team in scoring and rebounding, averaging 17.0 points and 8.4 rebounds per game. Despite his play being interrupted by an ankle injury last season, Howard finished by leading all rookies in the League in rebounding (8.4 rpg).

On the defensive end, Gheorghe Muresan, at 7-7, continues to be an improving player for the Bullets. He led the team in blocks (1.74 bpg) and was third on the team in rebounding (6.7 rpg) last season. He also continues to improve on the offensive end, averaging 12.3 points per game in the last three months of last season. Big Gheorghe was without question one of the most improved players in the league.

Don MacLean will assist Webber, Howard and Wallace in the front court. Although injuries last season prevented MacLean from continuing his development, he continues to improve and I anticipate significant contributions from him.

We are looking for big things from Calbert Cheaney this year. He continues to improve his game and appears to be comfortable with his ability and accepting his role on this team. Last season Cheaney was third on the team in scoring (16.6 ppg) and minutes played per game (34.0). This year I foresee continued improvements and leadership from Calbert. I anticipate great things from him at both forward and guard positions during the 95-96 campaign.

During the summer, we were comitted to bringing a quality point guard to this team. On September 27 we accomplished that goal with the addition of all-star guard Mark Price from Cleveland. Doug Overton, who was the only Bullets player to play in all 82 games, and Brent Price, coming off a knee injury last season, can be expected to challenge for minutes at point guard. Last season, Overton led the team in three-point field goal percentage (42.4 %) and ranked second on the team in free throw percentage, shooting 87.2 percent.

Rasheed Wallace, our top draft selection in this year's draft, will definitely complement this starting line-up. His athleticism and versatility are outstanding qualities. He is capable of playing several positions and is the kind of player who is reminiscent of top players from winning teams of the past. He can run the floor, he's a great shot blocker and shoots for a high percentage in the low post. He will be able to play the forward position as well as the center position. Wallace will need some time to physically mature; however, with his immense talent and athleticism I am confident that he will be an integral part of this ball club.

One of our main goals this season will be strengthening team defense. Defense is a must and we can not afford to continue lagging in this area.

We have a great nucleus and a wonderful young spirit with Webber, Howard, Cheaney, and Muresan and veteran leadership in Mark Price. Wallace, undoubtedly, adds to this talented pool. We believe we are taking another step to building a winning team. This roster presents a number of opportunities and options and I very much like this group of players. We are looking forward to a successful 1995-96 campaign. ★

BULLETS IN THE COMMUNITY

PLAYER FOUNDATIONS: Several Bullets players have started their own foundations to give back much of their time and money to benefit area children's interests. The Juwan Howard Foundation has sponsored a "Warm Hearts" winter clothes drive, bought books for children in the "Reading Is Fundamental" program, and adopted an orphanage in Washington, D.C. The Mitchell Butler Foundation provides scholarship assistance to deserving students in the Los Angeles area. The Chris Webber/Time-Out Foundation assists numerous children's organizations in both the Detroit and Washington, D.C. area communities.

HOME TEAM PROJECT: The Bullets and Fannie Mae have joined forces to refurbish several dilapidated houses for first-time-buyer families in the Washington, D.C. community. The Home Team project began in October 1994 in the Shaw neighborhood of Washington, D.C. Two additional houses are presently being refurbished.

HOOPMARKS: This past summer, the Bullets encouraged recreational reading with the "Hoopsmarks" program for young adults in the metro area. Through Washington, D.C. libraries, students received a bookmark featuring a different Bullets player for every two books they read. After they had read 12 books and collected an entire team, including a mascot, every student received two free tickets to a designated Bullets game, and an invitation to a special pre-game reception.

STAY-IN-SCHOOL: During the 1995-96 season, thousands of Washington, D.C. and Baltimore area students will participate in the Bullets "Stay In School" program. Students will be rewarded based on their successful completion of the "Pick and Roll" reading incentive program. The program requires students to read eight books between November and February to earn a place on Juwan Howard's All-Star Reading Team.

RESURFACING PROJECT: The Bullets, in conjunction with Washington Gas and NationsBank, spent more than $50,000 resurfacing three basketball courts in the metro Washington and Baltimore areas this past summer. The project included the asphalting and paving of the courts, installation of new poles and baskets, and painting NBA regulation lines and logos on the new courts.

CREATIVE ARTS CONTESTS: The Bullets sponsor two creative arts contest for area school children each year. In January, high school students are invited to participate in an essay contest to honor the memory of Dr. Martin Luther King on his birthday. To celebrate Black History Month in February, junior high school students will be invited to participate in an art contest to recognize significant figures in African-American history. Winners of both contests will be honored at a Bullets home game.

THE BULLETTES AND HOOPS: The "Reebok Bullettes," the club's dance squad, and "Hoops," the team's mascot, will continue to make an impact in the community this season with numerous appearances for charitable organizations throughout the area. In addition, the "Junior Bullettes," a dance team comprised of the daughters of Bullets VIP season ticket holders, will be entertaining fans at select home games for the third straight season.

For more information about player appearances and community events, please contact the Bullets Community Relations Department at (301) 773-2255.

NBA IN THE COMMUNITY

The NBA, its teams and players share a commitment to supporting programs dedicated to improving the quality of life for all people.

For years, the NBA has created and implemented programs league-wide to address important social issues, with special emphasis on helping young people. This year's youth-based education programs will include: the NBA Stay In School program, created to encourage students to graduate from high school through school visits by NBA players and coaches; and conflict resolution workshops designed to train teachers and educate students in methods to resolve conflict without resorting to violence. Public service announcements and educational materials will also focus on anti-violence/conflict resolution messages.

The NBA continues its support of CARE, the National Committee to Prevent Child Abuse and Special Olympics through television and radio public service announcements and other awareness-building efforts. The NBA also creates PSAs in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and Black History Month each year.

In addition, the NBA's 29 teams are making a difference, across the United States and Canada, through active involvement in a multitude of outreach efforts pertinent to the needs of their respective communities.

1994-95 SEASON IN REVIEW

The GMC Jimmy has a low step-in height. (Not everyone can jump like the Bullets.)

Having legs up to your armpits may be a prerequisite for getting into some sport utilities, but not the GMC Jimmy. Because we've found another way to achieve noteworthy stature: A low step-in height that doesn't sacrifice ground clearance. So if your hang time isn't up to that of the Bullets, don't sweat it. You'll find the GMC Jimmy quite comfortable to get into.

1994-95 TEAM NOTES

STANDING ROOM ONLY: The Bullets sold out a franchise record 30 home games, shattering the previous record of 20 set during the 1992-93 season. In 41 home games, the Bullets averaged a franchise record 17,100 fans per game. The Bullets sold out 10 of their final 11 contests, including the last six straight. The team played to .941 percent capacity at home (18,756 at USAir Arena and 12,756 at Baltimore Arena).

DOWN TO THE WIRE: The Bullets tied for the league lead with San Antonio (24-13) and Milwaukee (20-17) in games decided by six points or less, posting a 15-22 record in their 37 tight contests. The league average was 27.6 games.

SWITCHING IT UP: Washington ranked fourth in the league in games lost because o injury or illness. Fourteen players combined for a total of 317 games lost, which prompted Lynam to use 15 different starting line-ups during the season. The team began the season with a starting line-up of: Tom Gugliotta, F; Calbert Cheaney, F; Kevin Duckworth, C; Rex Chapman, G; Scott Skiles, G. The Bullets pulled off the rare feat of finishing the season with five different starters: Juwan Howard, F; Don MacLean, F; Gheorghe Muresan, C; Mitchell Butler, G; Doug Overton, G.

THE CRIB: The Bullets were the second youngest team in the league behind the Dallas Mavericks. The team was stocked with three rookies (Howard, McIlvaine and Tucker) and four players with only one year of NBA experience under their belt (Butler, Cheaney, Muresan and Webber).

TWO FAB: The two youngest members of the Bullets, Juwan Howard and Chris Webber, arrived to the Bullets on the same day (Nov. 17, 1994). The duo ranked as the team's top two scorers and the Bullets were 9-21 (.300) when they started together in frontcourt positions, including a 9-19 mark (.321) when they started together at the forward positions.

MID-WEEK WOES: The Bullets recorded a 6-37 record (.140 during the week (Monday through Thursday) and a 15-24 record (.385) in weekend games. Following is the breakdown: 2-6 on Mondays, 1-12 on Tuesdays, 2-11 on Wednesdays, 1-8 on Thursdays, 6-12 on Fridays, 6-7 on Saturdays and 3-5 on Sundays.

BACK-TO-BACK GAMES: The Bullets participated in 21 back-to-back series, posting a 5-16 record in the first games and a 6-15 mark in the second games. Overall, the Bullets were swept 12 times. On April 5-7, the team played a rare three-games-in-three-days set at Indiana, vs. Phoenix and at Charlotte. Weary Washington dropped all three contests.

THE ROOK: Juwan Howard posted an impressive debut season, which included NBA Rookie of the Month honors in February. His bid for Rookie of the Year was hindered by a late-season ankle injury which forced him out of 10 games. He led all rookies in rebounding (8.9 rpg) and field goal percentage (.489), and was third in scoring (17.0 ppg). Following is a look at how Howard ranks among Bullets all-time rookie leaders:
